Tours & Excursions

Domaine Val de Près (Craft Village)

Experience traditional Creole culture showcased at Domaine de Val des Près. The latter consists of five attractions highlighting Creole architecture, arts and craft, and gastronomy: the 'Grann Kaz' Plantation House built around 1870; 'La Kaz Rosa' a typical 20th century working class home, 12 craft workshops that host local crafts; the 'Vye Marmit' restaurant serving typical Creole cuisine and finally; the 'Maison de Coco, a house built of coconut products in which you will find gifts made from all things coconut.

Kenwyn House

One of Seychelles' most renowned monuments, Kenwyn House is a must-see for visitors exploring the Seychelles capital, Victoria. An elegant example of French colonial architecture, Kenwyn House offers visitors a chance to explore this historic national monument while browsing a world-class selection of crafted South African diamonds and other precious gems at duty-free prices, as well as an array of gifts and souvenirs.

Le Jardin du Roi

Le Jardin Du Roi Spice Garden is in keeping with the original French tradition of the 18th century spice trade. From its location atop hills and across valleys, the garden boasts rows of vanilla vines, citronelle, cinnamon, nutmeg, pepper and other spices, as well as medicinal and endemic plants that offer a real experience of 'nature at its best.'

The spices, beautiful hand made candles and the medicinal plants, seldom seen in the world are also on sale at the Spice shop, which attracts people from all over the world.

Other buildings such as the old farm homestead still stands -- a pleasant reminder of yesteryears. The small museum houses interesting artefacts and documents on agriculture and history.

Cathedral of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception

This imposing Cathedral is the Mother Church of the Catholic Diocese in Seychelles. Constructed on the site where the first vault, devoted to the Virgin of the Immaculate Conception, was built in March 1851, the Cathedral is one of the first churches in Seychelles.

The first and only Seychellois Bishop, Felix Paul, who passed away on the 21st November 2001, is buried inside the cathedral in a tomb built in the flooring.

The tomb is not visible but its location is marked by a special plaque. The Cathedral has undergone numerous renovations over the years. In 1993-94 it was completely renovated, except for the external walls. The last renovation was completed in 1995 when Seychellois sculptor, Egbert Marday fashioned the tabernacle and the carved doors.

Sir Selwyn Selwyn Clarke Market

A visit to Mahé's busy and colourful market is the way to get a feel for the Seychellois and their way of life. Built in 1840 and renovated in 1999, it remains the bustling heart of the capital and definitely the best place to buy fresh fruits, fish, vegetables and spices.

An attractive array of boutiques and shops selling a variety of souvenirs, clothing and local works of art further complement the lively atmosphere that is especially vibrant on Saturday mornings.

Kot Man-Ya Exotic Flower Garden

Kot Man-Ya is part of the Anse Royale Ecotourism pilot initiative, administered under the Ecotourism Society of Seychelles, TESS.

It is among the first steps in really bringing tourism activities to and within the community and offers a unique and different experience of Seychelles for the discerning nature lovers and the local flower enthusiast alike.

With their ravishing elegance, sparkling colours, bold geometric lines and symmetrical perfection; the flower heads of exotic tropical, cater for the ultimate in floral brilliance.

Mission Lodge

Situated just below the summit of Sans Souci, the Mission Lodge affords one of the most extraordinary views of Mahé's west coast. Once the site of a farm and boarding school for liberated slave children that opened in March 1876, it was first known as 'Venn's Town' and then renamed 'Capucin'.

Today, ruins of 'Venn's Town' can still be seen at the beginning of an avenue that leads to the viewing lodge that commands a breathtaking view of verdant mountainsides, and the vast azure ocean above which majestic tropic birds glide. Here, tranquillity and stunning natural beauty will conspire to win your heart.

National Botanical Garden

Located in Mont Fleuri, on the outskirts of Victoria, the Botanical Garden is one of Seychelles' oldest National Monuments, dating back more than a century. It houses a wide collection of mature, exotic and endemic plants within five acres of landscaped and beautifully maintained tropical gardens.

Apart from the palms, the garden is home to a wide variety of spice and fruit trees most of which can only be seen in this garden. An added attraction is the population of giant tortoises from Aldabra, some of which are over 150 years old. Fruit bat colonies can be found feeding or roosting in the taller trees overhead and the latest feature is an orchid house which holds a collection of brightly coloured orchids including Seychelles' own native orchids.
